Spec. Mel.: “Joy of the ranks of heaven ...”:

Adorned with a peaceful disposition, * thou wast chosen in holiness to minister unto all, O most blessed Theodotus, * and illumined with the crown of suffering, * thou hast joined chorus in the heavens * with those who suffered with thee.  With them pray thou, that we be saved.

Having offered thyself to the Lord * as a sacred vessel, submitting to His words, O divinely blessed one, * thou didst generously give to the poor, O wise martyr, * noetically laying up for thyself * the riches of martyrdom,  which cannot be taken away.

Behold the river of salvation! Behold the living well-spring, * which the company of holy virgins hath been shown to be! * Wherefore, come ye fervently: * Let us who are sick now draw forth healing, * and let those in sorrow draw forth joy,  through the supplications of the holy brides of Christ!

And 3 Stichera of the holy martyrs, in Tone IV:
Spec. Mel.: “Thou hast given a sign ...”:

Illumined with the radiance * of the three-Sunned Godhead, * ye passed through the darkness of tortures * and have been revealed to be brilliant stars, * the divine confirmation of the Church, * ever shedding light, O holy martyrs. * Wherefore, bowing down before your relics * and the dust of your bodies,  we celebrate your resplendent festival.

O ye faithful, with joy let us all now bless * Peter and Dionysius, * Paul, Andrew and Benedimus, * who were valiant and firm, * Christina, Heraclius and Paulinus, * who suffered steadfastly, * the three together, * trampled underfoot all the wiles of the serpent  and dispelled the darkness of idolatry with grace.

With your blood, O blessed ones, * ye purchased the unshakable kingdom of God, * and ye attained unto the calm havens, * having endured all the threefold waves of evils * with manly mind, O ye divinely sanctified ones. * Wherefore, ye are called blessed * and are glorified by all, * pray ye always, that we find mercy  on the day of judgment.

Glory ..., Both now ..., from the Pentecostarion.

AT MATINS

ODE I

Canon of the holy martyr & the holy women, in Tone IV:

Irmos: Let us chant a hymn of victory * unto the Lord, * Who most gloriously drowned Pharaoh in the sea, * for He hath been glorified.

Let us sing unto the Lord, Who hath strengthened human weakness against the invisible foe and crowned it with victories!

Receiving a victory bestowed by God, O glorious spiritual athlete Theodotus, thou wast revealed to be unvanquished by the adversaries, having conquered them.

Adorned with the beauty of divine purity, O virgins, ye entered into the tribunal as it were a bridal-chamber, hymning Christ the Bridegroom.

Theotokion: By thy birthgiving, O Theotokos, all of us who with love glorify thee as the Mother of the God of all mankind, have partaken of divine glory.

Canon of the holy martyrs, in Tone IV:

Irmos: I will sing unto Thee, O Lord my God, * for Thou hast led Thy people out of the bondage of Egypt, * and hast drowned in the waters * the chariots and the might of Pharaoh.

O champions of the Faith, from sufferings and every evil circumstance, deliver those who with faith ever celebrate your sacred memory.

Most gloriously propelled by the mast and sail of the Cross, O God-bearers, ye navigated the depths of tortures without sinking, drowning the enemy.

Ye have joined the ranks of heaven, enduring wounds in your bodies, O holy ones; wherefore, we honor your divine memory today.

Made steadfast by the law of God, O wise ones, suffering lawfully ye set at naught the counsels of the iniquitous and have received divine glory.

Theotokion: As the throne of the King, upon which He sat O Virgin, thou hast prepared a heavenly seat for the faithful. And with love we honor and glorify thee.

ODE III

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: My heart hath been firmly established * in the Lord my God: * for by Him the weak * have been girded with strength.

Strengthened in the Lord thy God, O martyr Theodotus, with truth thou didst cast down the adverse foe.

Having set aside the coarseness of the flesh through abstinence, O passion-bearers, ye soared aloft to the heights of martyrdom.

Not inclining your ears to the allurements of the enemy, ye suffered lawfully, obedient to the laws of God.

Theotokion: Established upon a rock by hope in thee, O Virgin, we remain unshaken by the threefold waves of temptations.

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: The bow of the mighty hath waxed feeble * and the weak have girded themselves with strength: * therefore is my heart established * in the Lord.

Having set the feet of thy soul upon the rock of the Faith, O blessed Peter, thou wast not vanquished by the opposition of the ungodly, O all-blessed one.

Thy city, O Peter, setteth thee before the world as a radiant star dispelling the night of ungodliness with divine grace.

Crushed by wheels of torture and heavy bonds, and unceasingly beaten, O Peter, thou wast shown to be a crown-bearer, strengthened by looking toward God.

Offering hymnody to God, O passion-bearers, ye endured every application of torture; wherefore, ye have been deemed worthy of crowns.

Theotokion: O Virgin Mother and Theotokos, who alone remainest virgin after birthgiving, and hast truly been shown to be a servant of the great mystery, having giving birth to God.

Sessional Hymn of the holy martyr, in Tone IV:

Spec. Mel.: “Go thou quickly before ...”:

Having been anointed by the divine Spirit, O glorious one, thou didst become the servant of all, having suffered steadfastly, and thou hast thereby been greatly glorified. Wherefore, assembling, O Theodotus, we honor thee, celebrating thy holy memory with faith, whereon do thou save all by thy supplications.

Glory ..., Sessional Hymn of the holy martyrs, in the same melody:

Adorned with the blood of martyrdom, ye stand before the King and Lord of all, O right victorious martyrs. Wherefore, with gladness we celebrate your honored memory today, asking that through you we may receive forgiveness of our debts and great mercy.

Both now ..., Sessional Hymn from the Pentecostarion, or this Theotokion, in Tone IV:

O all-immaculate Virgin * who hast given birth to the transcendent God: * do thou unceasingly entreat Him with the incorporeal ones, * that He grant forgiveness of transgressions * and correction of life before the end, * to us who, as is meet, hymn thee with faith and love,  O thou who alone art most hymned.

Stavrotheotokion: When Thy most pure Mother beheld Thee uplifted upon the Cross, O Word of God she exclaimed, lamenting maternally: “What is this new and strange wonder, O my Son? How is it that Thou, the Life of all, dost taste of death desiring to bring life to the dead, in that Thou art compassionate?”

ODE IV

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: I have heard report of Thy dispensation, * how Thou wast born of the Virgin, * who having given birth, remained undefiled. * and I glorify Thy dispensation O Savior.

Having drowned the tyrant in the blood of thy martyrdom as in the sea, O martyr, thou dwellest in delight incorruptible, hymning Christ, the Bestower of crowns.

The right laudable choir of passion- bearers, the seven wise virgins, hath shone forth in the divine bridal-chamber of Christ, having lit their most radiant lamps.

Theotokion: Having thee as their noetic crown, O Virgin, the virgin passion-bearers boast in thee, hymning thy Son and God, the Bridegroom and Master.

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: For the sake of love for Thine image, * O compassionate One, * Thou didst ascend the cross * and the nations melted away. * For Thou, O Lover of mankind, * art my strength and my praise.

Having by divine vigilance, shaken off slumber from the eyelids, and slothfulness from your souls, ye lulled to sleep all the evil intentions of the ungodly.

Slain by stoning, Andrew, Paul and Dionysius have been deemed worthy of life everlasting, as most precious and divine stones of the Word.

With faith let us praise the martyrs today: the most comely flowers of piety, the divine fragrance of Christ.

Having disdained things below by desire for that which is divine, and valiantly endured pain in their flesh, rejoicing, they passed over to the life which is devoid of pain.

Theotokion: O all-hymned Virgin Birthgiver of God, from every evil circumstance, from misfortunes and tribulations save those who hymn and set their hope in thee.

ODE V

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: O Thou Who hast caused the light to shine, * who hast made bright the dawn and revealed the day; * glory be to Thee, glory be to Thee, * O Jesus Thou Son of God.

Pouring forth the wisdom of doctrine from the cup of thy soul, O wise and glorious Theodotus, thou hast gladdened the hearts of the pious.

Drinking in the dew of abstinence, the honored ones noetically blossomed forth with purity, having shown themselves to be the sweet fragrance of Christ.

Treating the pangs of the flesh as delight for the sake of the Lord's love, the virgins suffered valiantly for His sake.

Theotokion: Delivered from the deception of demonic idolatry by thy divine birthgiving, O pure one, we hymn thee, the cause and mediatrix of good things.

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: Do Thou O Lord send down upon us * Thine enlightenment, and free us * from the gloom of transgression, O Good One, * granting us Thy peace.

Sealed with noetic light, O martyrs, without stumbling ye traversed the darkness and the evil night of polytheism of martyrdom, by divine power.

Resplendent with the beauties of virginity, O Christina, thou wast splendidly adorned with radiant wounds, and rejoicing, made thine abode in the noetic bridal-chamber of Christ.

They who cruelly desired thy body, O martyr Christina, suffered mightily, bound to God's will by thy sweet discourse.

Theotokion: O unwedded Bride of God, by whom we have been released from our ancient debt, and by whom we have been shown to be children of the heavenly father by grace. Preserve us who hymn thee!

ODE VI

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: As Thou didst deliver Jonah the prophet from the Whale, * do Thou deliver me O Christ God, * and bring me out from the depths of mine offences * and save me, for Thou alone lovest mankind.

Finding thee to be a divine haven, O Theodotus, the faithful fend off the threefold waves of the ungodly, hymning Christ the Helmsman.

With love for the Creator the passion-bearers strengthened their natural weakness and for Him bore well supra-natural struggles.

Having lighted the divers lamps of your seven-branched lampstand, O virgins, ye entered the arena of martyrdom as it were a bridal-chamber.

Theotokion: The earth and those who dwell thereon have been delivered from the ancient curse by thy birthgiving, O Virgin. Thee do we ever glorify as the cause of blessing.

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: Prefiguring Thy three-day burial * Prophet Jonah praying in the belly of the sea-monster cried aloud: * Deliver me from corruption * O Jesus Thou King of hosts.

Having manfully contended, the glorious Heraclius received great glory, becoming a citizen of paradise, and having joined with the honored choirs of spiritual athletes, he now rejoiceth.

Let us hymn the manly Benedimus and Andrew with Paulinus, Heraclius and Dionysius, Peter, Paul and Christina, the martyrs of the Lord.

Cut asunder, unjustly stoned, slain in the fire, O glorious martyrs, ye have been deemed worthy to live in the Church of the firstborn.

Shining forth like stars in the firmament of the Church, the most wise passion-bearers chanted piously to Him Who had revealed them: “Let us worship the Son of God!”

Theotokion: Like a meadow, O Virgin, thou didst produce the fertile Grain of life Who nourisheth the faithful with life and doth truly banish famine from the earth.

Kontakion of the holy martyrs, in Tone II:

Spec. Mel.: “Seeking the highest ...”:

Having struggled well as a spiritual athlete, O Theodotus, * with the spiritual athletes and the passion-bearing virgins * thou hast received crowns of honor.  Wherefore, unceasingly entreat Christ God on behalf of us all.

ODE VII

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: Thou didst speak with Moses on the mountain * and prefigure the Virgin in the bush: * O God of our fathers, blessed art Thou.

Denouncing the wiles of the enemy with spiritual wisdom, O passion-bearer, thou didst save the martyrs who suffered with thee from their deceit.

Giving wings to your thoughts with the love of incorrupt good things, O virgins, through struggles ye entered in unto them, hymning Christ.

In nowise inclining toward the lies of the author of evils, O glorious passion-bearers, ye kept the commandment of the Creator inviolate.

Theotokion: O most pure one, cease not to entreat Him Who was born of thee, that those who hymn thee may behold His glory and delight therein with the martyrs.

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: Of old the Children of Abraham in Babylon * trampled down the flame of the furnace, * crying aloud with hymns: * O God of our Fathers, blessed art Thou.

Emulating in faith the young children in Babylon, O blessed ones, ye eagerly entered the fire, crying aloud: O God of our fathers, blessed art Thou!

Rejecting graven images, ye did not worship them O glorious spiritual athletes, and endured an ever-memorable death, manifestly receiving immortal delights.

With manliness of soul and strength of character the martyrs cast down the arrogance of the iniquitous, crying out with faith: O God of our fathers, blessed art Thou!

Strengthened by the words of the godly martyrs, O most glorious Paulinus, thou didst elect to die, crying out to Him Who created all things: O God of our fathers, blessed art Thou.

Theotokion: O ye faithful, let us all glorify the Theotokos in hymnody, for she is the ark of God, the jar of the divine Manna, the golden lampstand, the table, and the holy mountain.

ODE VIII

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: Those who confessed Christ the King, * the Children prisoners, in the furnace * cried with a loud voice, saying: * O all ye works of the Lord, praise ye the Lord.

Having Christ our Benefactor ever preserving and strengthening thee in all amid the pangs of suffering, O Theodotus, thou didst undertake supra-natural struggles, hymning God the King.

The goodly virgins, sweetening their souls with the goodness of Christ, hastened after Him suffering valiantly, and in joy cried aloud: “Thee do we supremely exalt, O Christ, throughout the ages!”

O Word, Thou Creator of all things, as God Thou hast strengthened the weakness of women’s nature in sufferings; wherefore, having struggled well, the holy ones hymned Thee, God the King.

Theotokion: As God, the Creator and the Lover of mankind, renewed human nature and took on humanity from thee, restoring the nature of us who confess thee to be the true Theotokos.

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: O almighty Redeemer of all, * having descended and bedewed the children * in the midst of the flame, * Thou didst teach them to sing: * All ye works bless and hymn the Lord.

With the shedding of their bodies of clay, the spiritual spiritual athletes were clothed in a vesture woven of heavenly grace, crying out with love: All ye works, bless and hymn the Lord!

Purified by the sprinkling of divine Blood, O martyrs, ye poured forth your blood for Christ, chanting unceasingly: All ye works, bless and hymn the Lord!

O blessed ones, ye were shown to be comely grapes of the noetic Vine, exuding the wine of piety for us who with love cry aloud: All ye works, bless and hymn the Lord!

Theotokion: O most pure one, thou hast been revealed to be a noetic mercy-seat, receiving the supplications of all and bearing them to thy Son, unto the deliverance of those who chant: All ye works, bless and hymn the Lord!

ODE IX

Canon of the holy martyr & virgins

Irmos: O undefiled Theotokos, * with never-silent hymns * we magnify thine Offspring born without seed, * Christ our God.

O glorious Theodotus, by the power of the Spirit thou didst vanquish the hordes of falsehood, and receive a crown of victory.

Breathing forth miracles like ointment, O Theodotus, thou dost perfume all who glorify thee with faith and love.

Lighting your seven-lamped beacon, O honored ones, guide us to Christ God, the never-waning Light.

Theotokion: The desire of thee, which surpasseth all love, O most pure one, doth lead me to unceasingly cry aloud to thee: Rejoice, O Sovereign Lady!

Canon of the holy martyrs

Irmos: Eve dwelt under the curse of sin * because of the infirmity of disobedience; * but thou, O Virgin Theotokos, * hast through the Offspring of thy pregnancy * blossomed forth blessing upon the world. * Wherefore, we all magnify thee.

Sacrificing themselves with desire, the valiant martyrs eagerly gave up their blood, rejoicing, and having received riches which cannot be taken away, the all-praised ones joined the choirs of the martyrs.

Ye were shown to be noetic flowers spreading the perfume of piety, passion-bearers and citizens of the city of God, havens of salvation for the storm-tossed, beacons and champions of the Truth; wherefore as is meet, ye are called blessed.

Let us honor the wise Heraclius with Peter and Paul, Paulinus and Benedimus, together with Andrew, Christina and Dionysius, who suffered mightily for Christ destroying pagan delusion.

The ground received your blood, which was shed for the Benefactor of all, O ye of great renown, and the habitations of the just have received your souls. Joining chorus with them, be ye mindful of those who ever commemorate you.

Theotokion: With joy we the faithful offer thee the cry of the angel, O Bride of God: Rejoice, O helper of all mankind, confirmation of the martyrs and apostles, announcement of all the prophets, O all-immaculate Birthgiver of God.
